

117th WPI-IIIS Seminar

Topics on Research Ethics – #4

Professional ethics for scientists and journalists

Scientists and journalists have similar functions for public. Both are recording knowledge in journals. Scientists record “something new or first” through peer-reviewed publication. Journalists record “something significant” through providing forum. Therefore, ethics for scientists and ethics for journalists can both be treated as professional ethics. This seminar introduces the ethics tests for professional’s behaviors based on the professional ethics.
